Slice of Paradise

Though it resides in a European-style villa, this Miami bath suite stops short of going all-out traditional. Instead, the soothing space lends a modern twist to classic style with a relaxed vibe inspired by the lushly landscaped courtyard it overlooks.

Bringing a touch of the gardens inside involved a twofold approach. First, the designers capitalized on the views with a set of French doors and a pair of tall windows, including one in the shower. Then they brought the natural hues found outside into the bath—albeit in the form of a muted, neutral color palette of soft greens, linens, and silvers. Seafoam green paint topped with an iridescent glaze dresses the walls, providing a splash of color against prominent, crisp white trim. Underfoot, matching green-and-white tiles form a checkerboard pattern.

OPPOSITE: The juxtaposition of light and dark is evident behind the white tub, where the dark wood of the French doors contrasts with the crisp white of the prominent door casing.

RIGHT: Green-toned marble tops the storage-packed vanity. A bolder version of the seafoam green paint that covers the walls is present in the multicolor backsplash.

Once the views and hues were in place, it was time to bring in the amenities. The most important addition: a sculptural soaking tub perched in front of the French doors that overlook the garden. A crystal chandelier suspended courtyard it overlooks.
